Dental Health is Important

Almost every cat will develop some degree of dental disease in their lifetime. In fact, by the age of three most pets already have signs of periodontal disease. Starting early and providing regular dental care is important.

The Unseen Harm

While bad breath and yellow teeth are some of the obvious signs, poor dental health results in chronic pain for your pet and can lead to kidney, liver and heart disease. Regular dental cleanings and evaluations are an important step to help your pet lead a healthy and happy life.

Prevention is the key to better health

Thanks to advances in veterinary medicine, pets are living longer, healthier lives than ever before. Preventive care can improve your cat's quality of life and help you enjoy more healthy years together.
